

From The Alumni Association President:
William Harris RN, '05

As we start the new academic year for our Alumni Association, I want to thank Kim Poorman, who was our President last year. Under her leadership, we introduced some new ideas:

- Combining our 50-year-anniversary and Spring Dinner, which turned out to be a lot of fun and attracted many alumni.
- Improving communications by joining Facebook. If you're on Facebook, fan the Aultman College Alumni Association page and keep updated on meetings and other news.

Looking ahead to this year, I have several goals in mind:

- 1. Attract recent grads. We welcome your ideas for social events, programs, guest speakers, etc., that will add value to your life.
- 2. Improve communications. Send us your e-mail address so we can keep you informed of upcoming events (without loading up your inbox).
- 3. Create a plan to welcome Aultman School of Radiologic Technology alumni. They'll be joining us when radiography education becomes part of Aultman College of Nursing and Health Sciences in the Fall of 2011.
- 4. Help support fundraising. Assist in raising dollars to build science labs in the college.

Nursing Education Valuable for Mom of Quints

"It's hard to turn off the 'nurse' in me," explained Amie Spicocchi ('08), mother of seven children – five of whom were born on the same day, Aug. 3, 2010, after a gestation of 24 weeks, 3 days. Each of the quintuplets – four girls and one boy – weighed less than two pounds at birth, creating an emotional roller coaster for Amie, a pediatric nurse at Aultman Hospital, and her husband, Vince, a paramedic and fireman. Residents of Massillon, Ohio, they also have two older children.

"My nursing training helps me think critically, multi-task and track the health of each baby just as I used to when I was with my two to six patients each day in the hospital," she said. "I try to think about the lab reports like a nurse would, not a mom, because it can be so emotional."

The babies are expected to stay in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit at Akron Children's Hospital for a couple more months. When the medical team makes the rounds each morning, Amie observes their discussions of blood tests and echocardiograms, and makes sure the plan for each day is followed for each infant.

"When they are ready to come home, they will have some special needs, like oxygen treatments," she said. "In some ways, this is scarier for me than for someone who is not a nurse because I understand the dangers.

"I am grateful for my nursing education and the training I received through Aultman and I am blessed to be the mother of these children," added Amie. "My experience as a pediatric nurse has given me the ability to take care of so many amazing children and their families. Now, I can rely on my education and experience to take care of my own."

Get to know your president: William Harris

William Harris ('05) is probably the first president of the Alumni Association to use an Apple iPhone 4 to organize his life. William loves to think creatively and frequently invents, organizes and fixes things. In that spirit, we'll use a highly efficient bullet format to introduce William to you:

Annual Golf Outing

The College set new records in the number of golfers and dollars raised at this year's Annual Golf Outing on Aug. 18. The outing benefits the 1892 Annual Campaign, which provides scholarships for deserving Aultman College students. Twelve teams battled it out, scramble-style, to earn fabulous prizes and top team honors. Winning for the third year was an Aultman administration team consisting of Dr. Lori Mertes, Liz Getz and Kathy Zimmer. John and Carol Easterday ('61), owners of Wilkshire Golf Club, donated the carts and greens fees. New sponsors this year were Canton Data Print, SA Communale (who also fielded a team) and Bill and Sharon Luntz. The College also welcomed a new team sponsored by the Canton Chamber of Commerce. A total of $2,938 was raised, which was combined with a generous "total funds raised" matching donation from AultCare, for a total raised of nearly $6000.

Alum's Life On the High Seas Featured in Upcoming Book

“So YOU'RE the one who got us into trouble,” said the Navy recruiters in the Buffalo, N. Y., office when Mary Morrison Green ('48) arrived there for the second time in 1954, shortly after the Korean War. Little did they know how determined Mary was to join the Navy.

Earlier, Mary and a fellow nurse who both worked at the Veterans Administration (VA) hospital in Buffalo decided to volunteer for the U.S. Naval Reserve. However, they had been rejected for what Mary decided were unimportant reasons – she wore dentures and her friend wore glasses.

'The Navy needs nurses like you'

So, Mary wrote a letter to the chief nurse of the Navy who called her back and said the Navy needs nurses like her. She told Mary to return to the recruiting office where the chief nurse would pave the way. In short order, Mary was a full Navy lieutenant with two stripes.

“I was posted to St. Albans Hospital on Long Island for a six-week indoctrination starting in June 1954. We learned Navy protocol and practical skills like how to organize and run a Navy hospital and how to train corpsmen,” recalled Mary. “The Marines taught us how to march on a parking lot near some homes, which attracted attention from neighbors who found it entertaining to watch us drill.”

the floor – I had lost that much weight in six weeks!”

Her first duty station was the Navy hospital in Philadelphia which specialized in orthopedics. She wasn't happy with that assignment. “I mentioned to the chief nurse that I liked working there, but I had joined the Navy to see the world, not work in the next state,” said Mary, a native Ohioan. Recognizing Mary's high spirits and capabilities, the chief nurse immediately called the Nurse Corps bureau and soon Mary was transferred to the Military Sea Transportation Service.

“We practiced swimming routines for lifesaving and to keep from drowning. If you couldn't swim, you couldn't go to sea,” said Mary. “They kept us busy from 6 a.m. until midnight. When I went for the final fitting on my uniform, my skirt fell to

She had orders to sail from San Francisco. Consistent with her style, Mary drove alone – before the interstate highway system was built – from her family home in Ohio to the West Coast.

Mary enjoys the Hawaiian culture with a doctor and chaplain who served with her on board the USNS Daniel I. Sultan.

Living her dream

Her next duty station? The USNS Daniel I. Sultan. Her ship carried 1,500 troops, plus 500 cabin passengers consisting of officers, women and children. It wasn't unusual to have 25-30 babies on board who needed formula made by the staff Mary supervised. At the age of 41, Mary was finally living her dream on a transport carrying U.S. military personnel to and from Japan, Hawaii, Guam, the Philippines and other places. For two years, 1956-1957, her job was to care for the welfare of the women and children on board.

Mary's maritime adventures will be chronicled in an upcoming book, Shipmates in Skirts, by Commander Catherine Leahy, U.S. Navy, Retired. The book is about Navy women who served on ships other than hospital ships.

That was just one in a host of experiences of this Aultman alum who, at the age of 95, still remembers the names, dates, locations and events of her life with admirable clarity. To learn more about Mary's adventures and her life after Aultman College, visit the Aultman Alumni tab at www.aultmancollege.edu.

Video Tribute to the Aultman School of Nursing

In 2012, we'll celebrate 120 years of nursing education here at Aultman. As part of that tribute, we are compiling a scrapbook and video program highlighting memories of Morrow House, nursing training, early clinical experiences and more. Alum in the Spotlight

Rose Day

Rose M. Day ('59) was named the Fall 2010 Alum in the Spotlight in recognition of her remarkable contributions to the Aultman College Alumni Association and 40-year nursing career with Aultman Hospital. Rose enrolled in the Aultman School of Nursing in 1956 at age 17 and enjoyed a long and distinguished career as an RN at Aultman Hospital. She earned her BSN at Malone University in 1999 and, at age 72, works as a faculty member in Malone's Clinical Skills lab. Despite her busy schedule, Rose has served as president of the Aultman School of Nursing Alumni Association twice, in 1983 and a two-year stint from 2001-2003. In the mid 1990s, Rose received the Contributing Alumni Award for volunteering with the chapter newspaper and regularly driving three older nurses to the monthly alumni meetings. Today, Rose is very active in the Aultman College Alumni Association, serving on the board as treasurer, a role she has held several times. Congratulations to Rose M. Day and many thanks for her valuable contributions !
